Retired ISP colonel Cline dies

Courier staff report

Robert J. Cline, the retired Indiana State Police colonel who made Madison his home, died Friday at River Terrace Health Campus in Madison.

Cline, 92, was a native of Osgood. He was diagnosed with pancreatic cancer and made the decision not to undergo treatment.

After serving in the Army Air Corps during World War II and earning a two-year certificate from Indiana University's Institute of Criminal Law Administration, Cline joined the Indiana State Police as a trooper. Cline rose from the lowest ranks in ISP to serve in the superintendent's office as the second in command to Supt. John T. Shettle. As an officer, Cline had served in several counties throughout southeastern Indiana.

After officially retiring from law enforcement, Cline applied his knowledge of computers to build a website — MadisonCameRunning.com — to serve the community he and his late wife, Rita, made their home. His website is well-known for its sharing of photos and stories of local people and visitors as well as its attention to the Madison Regatta and many other special events of the city.

The Madison Courier joined some of Cline's many friends from his time with the state police when they visited him in January to catch up with each other and trade memories. Those stories can be found on the Courier website under news. A video of the gathering is on WKMNews.com

Funeral arrangements and additional information are pending at Lytle Welty Funeral Homes.

The Courier will provide more information as soon as it is available.

Horst at work, Mary stable

Courier staff report

Horst Moehlmann was back at work at his Little Bakery Haus Sunday night and Monday morning, just two days after he and his wife were hit by a vehicle while crossing the street near the bakery's downtown location.

The store near Main and Cragmont downtown closed early Friday morning after the accident with both locations remaining closed Saturday and the hilltop reopening Sunday.

According to the couple's daughter-in-law, Angela Gregory, Horst sustained a minor wrist injury in the accident, while his wife, Mary Moehlmann, was believed to have suffered severe head trama, possibly a fractured skull.

Mary Moehlmann was flown to University of Louisville hostpital immediately after the accident, which occurred before sunrise Friday as she and her husband were crossing Main Street just west of Cragmont Street. She has remained in an unconscious, stable condition since, Gregory said in a text to the Madison Courier Monday morning.

Gregory asked the public to please keep Mary and the family in their prayers.

And, the public is doing just that if the Facebook pages for Horst's Little Bakery Haus and The Madison Courier are any indication. As of Monday morning, Horst's page had 485 comments with most offering prayers and good wishes, and the Courier's Facebook page had recorded another 87.

Horst Moehlmann started the Little Bakery Haus in 2004 after working 29 years at Dieken's Bakery in Madison.

He is a native of Germany who moved to the U.S. in 1972 and became a U.S. citizen in the fall of 2009, after being sworn in in Indianapolis.

Nimble-fingered, quick-witted, he became a Homemaker

By TRENTON SCROGGINS

Retiring from brick masonry and heavy machinery to blue jean quilting may seem like a feminine step for a laboring man, but for Arnold "Junior" Dunham, it was natural.

"This here is more complicated than putting an engine together," Junior said in an interview last Friday afternoon, touching the delicate seamwork of his current project. "It's just something to pass time with..."

Junior retired the first of last summer after many laborious years as a mason with the Dunham Brothers, 17 years in construction, 10 years in semitruck driving, and numerous more as a hod carrier, mechanic, heavy machinery operator, and pretty much anything else that's hands on.

"I'm a handy — what do you call it — a handyman. I do a lot," Junior said.

"He does a lot," his wife, Bonnie "Kay" Dunham, affirmed. "It keeps his hands busy so he's not smoking or eating too much."

"We enjoyed it — working with your hands," Junior explained his time working with his brothers in masonry. "We just got to the point where we labored so much we couldn't make no money on it anymore. Mother time caught up to us."

And now, Junior spends his days with his five grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren, cutting wood, crafting windchimes and bird feeders, helping his nephew restore a blue 1950 Chevy pickup — and quilting with the Jefferson County extension homemakers club.

This seems like a major flip for some, seeing a man that in his prime could use a backhoe to scoop off a co-worker's hat in a bet, to actively engaging in a group many consider a woman's club.

"One woman told me when I joined that it was a woman's club. And a state officer (for the homemakers) came over and apologized and said it was not a woman's club it was a homemakers club," he explained. "It's not all quilting, there's woodworking and photography, and more.

"You'd be surprised how many people does this. Like the men, if they did something like this, they wouldn't want anyone to know because 'that's a woman's job.'

"My uncle used to make baby quilts," Junior said sternly.

Though Junior does enjoy talking to women, the club gave him something to do as he grows older. It was the acceptance of a new challenge.

Military doctors in the crosshairs of big budget battle

By JORDAN RAU
Kaiser Health News

The U.S. military is devising major reductions in its medical corps, unnerving the system's advocates who fear the cuts will hobble the armed forces' ability to adequately care for health problems of military personnel at home and abroad.

The move inside the military coincides with efforts by the Trump administration to privatize care for veterans. The Department of Veterans Affairs last month proposed rules that would allow veterans to use private hospitals and clinics if government primary care facilities are not nearby or if they have to wait too long for an appointment.

Shrinking the medical corps within the armed forces is proving more contentious and complex. In 2017, a Republican-controlled Congress mandated changes in what a Senate Armed Services Committee report described as "an under-performing, disjointed health system" with "bloated medical headquarters staffs" and "inevitable turf wars." The directive sought a greater emphasis for military doctors on combat-related needs while transferring other care to civilian providers.

Details of reductions have yet to be finalized, a military spokeswoman said. But within the system and among alumni, trepidation has increased since Military.com, an online military and veterans organization, reported in January that the Department of Defense had drafted proposals to convert more than 17,000 medical positions into fighting and support positions — a 13 percent reduction in medical personnel.

"That would be a drastic first cut," said Dr. David Lane, a retired rear admiral and former director of the Walter Reed National Military Medical Center in Bethesda, Maryland.

At most risk in the current planning are positions that aren't considered essential to troops overseas, such as training spots for new doctors and jobs that can be outsourced to private physicians and hospitals — obstetricians and primary care doctors, for example. The reductions may also limit the military's medical humanitarian assistance and relief for foreign natural disasters and disease outbreaks.

Even in war zones, Lane warned, it would be a mistake to downplay the importance of contributions by doctors who do not specialize in trauma. In the 1991 invasion of Kuwait, for instance, cases of diseases and non-battle injuries rather than combat injuries created the most medical work, he said.

Indy firefighters OK after head-on crash on way to call

Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS — Authorities say four firefighters escaped with minor injuries after a head-on crash between their truck and a car while en route to an emergency call. The firefighters were headed late Sunday to the scene where a person was having trouble breathing when the car crossed the center line of a road and collided with the firetruck. The firetruck had its lights and sirens activated and was about two blocks from the station when the crash occurred. The Indianapolis Fire Department says the firefighters were wearing seatbelts and they had bumps and bruises. The 30-year-old man driving the car was checked out but was OK. The fire department says the crash left debris scattered over a roughly 200-yard-long area. The cause of the crash is under investigation.

Slow left-lane drivers ticketed

INDIANAPOLIS — Indiana State Police have handed out more than 200 tickets to motorists for driving too slowly in the left lane. WRTV-TV reported that state police ticketed 87 drivers in 2017 for left lane violations and 132 in 2018. The law enforcement agency also gave more than 1,000 warnings last year. Trooper Aaron Pfaff said slower drivers clogging the left lane can cause aggressive driving and road rage. A 2015 state law requires drivers to move to the right lane to allow faster traffic to pass. The Indiana Department of Transportation said it will periodically use alerts on its overhead highway message boards to help raise awareness about the left-lane law.

Public comments electric rate case

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indiana Office of Utility Consumer Counselor is encouraging comments in an electric rate case involving Northern Indiana Public Service Co. The office said an Indiana Utility Regulatory Commission public field hearing is scheduled for Monday at the Hammond High School auditorium. The hearing will start at 6 p.m. local time. Consumers are encouraged to arrive by 5:45 p.m. for an overview of field hearing procedures and the rate case process. At the hearing, consumers will be able to speak directly to the commission, under oath and on the record, regarding the case. They'll also be able to submit written comments for the case record. Consumers who wish to submit written comments may do so through Wednesday via the OUCC's website or by email at uccinfo@oucc.IN.gov

Trooper in relationship with girl, 17, fired

BLOOMINGTON — An Indiana State Police trooper has been fired after admitting to continuing a relationship with a 17-year-old girl. A state police document said Trooper Ryan Starnes was accused by the teenager's parents of maintaining a relationship with the girl between July and October 2018. The document from State Police Superintendent Doug Carter said Starnes committed conduct unbecoming an officer when "he continued a relationship with a female" after learning she was 17. Capt. Dave Bursten said state police were able to substantiate the allegation. Starnes' dismissal was effective Feb. 28, and he has until March 15 to file an appeal.

Atlas World Group to expand, add jobs

EVANSVILLE — Atlas World Group plans to expand its headquarters and move its international relocation services arm to the state from Seattle. The moving and storage company announced Monday that it will invest more than $1.1 million in relocation, software and equipment for its Evansville headquarters. In addition to the planned move of its international relocation services business, Atlas plans to form a new leasing company, AWG Equipment Leasing Inc., to offer financing. Atlas anticipates its consolidation and expansion plans will be complete by 2023. The company plans to add up to 75 new jobs in Indiana by the end of 2023. Atlas now employs nearly 400 in Evansville. The Indiana Economic Development Corp. offered Atlas up to $800,000 in conditional tax credits based on its job creation plans.

STATE BRIEFS

Dumped dead dogs were shot, beaten

VERNON — Authorities say that about a dozen dead dogs found dumped in a wooded area were shot or beaten to death. Investigators believe the dogs were likely dumped from a vehicle last month. They determined that most were shot with an air rifle and two puppies were fatally beaten. Jennings County Animal Control officials met with sheriff's department detectives last week about the dogs, which were found near a roadway by a motorist driving in the county on Feb. 28. Investigators say they were told the dead dogs weren't there the previous day. They included mature dogs and puppies. One of the puppies was found hanging from a tree and investigators says that's because it was likely tossed into the woods. Tips are being sought from the public.

Overdose deaths declined last year

MUNSTER — Drug overdose deaths declined last year after setting a record in 2017. Authorities said they are cautiously optimistic that the opioid epidemic is slowing down. Former Porter County Coroner Chuck Harris, who this year became the county's recorder, told The (Northwest Indiana) Times: "I would like to hope ... that we have reached the peak." County coroners say Lake County had 152 overdose deaths last year, Porter County had 46 and LaPorte had 17, compared with 196, 50 and 26, respectively, in 2017. That's a nearly 20 percent decline from 268 to 215 across the region. The Times reported experts attribute the fall to the widespread use of the overdose-reversal drug naloxone, an increase in treatment availability and more awareness about the crisis, among other reasons.

Popular birdwatching spot to get exhibits

LINTON — Future visitors to a popular southwestern Indiana birdwatching site can expect to see new exhibits about its wetland, grassland, and agricultural habitats. The Duke Energy Foundation recently awarded the Indiana Natural Resources Foundation a $20,000 grant to create the exhibits at the visitor center of the Goose Pond Fish & Camp Wildlife Area near Linton in Greene County. The (Terre Haute) Tribune-Star reported the exhibits are expected to be in place by spring 2020. More than 260 bird species, including federally endangered whooping cranes, have been documented at Goose Pond, attracting birders from across the country. The site draws about 12,000 wildlife watchers each year. Angie Haywood, director of education and outreach for the Indiana Division of Fish & Wildlife, said the exhibits will improve guest experiences.

Man stabbed in head during Walmart fight

BUECHEL — Police say a man has been stabbed in the head during a fight outside a Buechel Walmart, and authorities are still searching for the suspect. Louisville Metro Police spokeswoman Alicia Smiley told the Courier Journal that a fight started between two men outside the store Sunday afternoon and led to the stabbing. It's unclear what caused the fight. The suspect fled the scene, and authorities were still searching for him as of that night. West Buechel Police Chief Jim Sherrard said the man was conscious when police arrived at the scene. He lost consciousness on his way to the hospital, where he was in critical condition as of Sunday evening. Buechel police then reached out to Louisville police, whose homicide unit is now investigating the attack.

Crews installing signs designating I-165

OWENSBORO— Crews have begun installing signs that say Interstate 165 along the Natcher Parkway in western Kentucky. The Messenger-Inquirer reported that means 72 miles of the four-lane highway between Owensboro and Bowling Green is now an interstate, even though upgrades are continuing. Crews started posting signs last week and officials say it will take about two weeks to finish. The Greater Owensboro Chamber of Commerce has been pushing for the designation since December 2004. Chamber President Candance Brake said the interstate will "create boundless economic opportunities and tourism opportunities" for the area. The organization has argued that out-of-state business and industry doesn't understand how similar parkways are to interstates. Work continues to bring two interchanges up to federal guidelines.

Trial set for teen in school shooting

BENTON — A judge has set a trial date for a teenager accused of killing two classmates during a shooting at a Kentucky school. News outlets report Marshall Circuit Court Judge James Jameson on Friday set June 1, 2020, as the trial date for Gabriel Parker, who recently turned 17. Online court records show lawyers will have an opportunity at a May 17 hearing to file motions asking that the trial be moved from Marshall County. Parker was a sophomore when police say he killed students Preston Cope and Bailey Holt and injured more than a dozen others at Marshall County High School on Jan. 23, 2018. Parker has pleaded not guilty to murder and assault charges. A prosecutor has indicated he'll seek a sentence of life in prison.

Fayette County hospital to be sold at auction

By BOB HANSEN
Connersville News-Examiner

Fayette Regional Health System is being sold at auction. The community's hospital has received permission from the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Indianapolis to sell its assets by auction.

Bidding will be complete by April 30. Qualified buyers will have a final chance to raise their bids on May 2. The hospital will have new owners by May 9 if the court approves the sale.

Fayette Regional filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code in October 2018. Reorganization gives the hospital time to get its financial affairs in order so that creditors – parties that are owed money – can be paid. That process may include liquidating assets by selling them.

"The bankruptcy code requires us to get the best value" for settling claims, Wendy D. Brewer, one the hospital's Indianapolis-based bankruptcy attorneys, said on Friday.

The hospital and its attorneys believe the auction will establish the highest value by allowing groups interested in buying the assets to name the price they would pay. All of the hospital's physical assets – buildings and equipment – will be included in the sale.

Buyers can choose to bid on all of the combined assets or could choose to submit bids on just some of them. Bids will be analyzed to see what is the best outcome for the hospital.

Among the listed claims is one from the bank which has provided operating funds to help the hospital pay bills and meet payroll during the Chapter 11 reorganization.

That bank, Comerica Bank, has provided what is called post-petition financing, which is money lent to the hospital that would be repaid after the Chapter 11 proceeding ends. Comerica, which had also lent the hospital funds before the Chapter 11 filing, has agreed to provide up to $2.5 million during the reorganization.

The other claims listed in the order are from Comerica Bank and The Bank of New York Mellon Trust Co. for funds loaned before the Chapter 11 filing; and four liens filed by contractors and subcontractors related to work they performed at the hospital.

Low price, higher interest rates stress Hoosier community

By ED SEMMLER
South Bend Tribune

It's a daily ritual.

A group of farmers gather around 8 a.m. each day at Frick Services in Wyatt to talk about the weather, news of the day and issues facing farmers. It's a scene that plays out in agricultural communities across the country.

They know crop farmers who are struggling. They know dairy farmers who have folded in recent years as agriculture has been battered by low commodity prices, tariffs that have withered their markets and even changing consumer preferences.

But this group of farmers is different than many. They've been through the wringer more than once, so they generally avoid debt and aim to maintain some reserves to get them through slides that are measured in years.

Some have been forced to take jobs outside of farming in the worst down cycles, coming home at night to work the fields.

"That's why the equipment has lights," one quipped.

But caution comes from experience.

"Some of the guys who are in trouble have overspent or are paying too much to rent," said Larry Enders, who farms about 700 acres south of Wyatt. "If I can't make money on rented land, I'm not going to plant."

Enders said he won't be borrowing money to plant this year's crop because he still has some corn to sell from last year's harvest and some cash reserves set aside from when times were good.

But Enders is more the exception. Most have to take out loans because it costs about $392 to plant an acre of corn and roughly $282 to plant soybeans, said Roger Mochel, manager of Frick Services where the coffee confab was taking place.

The sums, which only include the cost of seed, fertilizer, crop insurance, herbicides and fuel, are staggering — $196,000 to plant 500 acres of corn and $141,000 to plant soybean — and the costs to borrow have gone up thanks to higher interest rates.

Though it might be possible to squeak by, even modest profit margins disappear when the cost of land, labor and machinery is included in the equation, said Michael Langemeier, an agricultural economist at Purdue University.

The fact is that more farms are starting to show stress as a result of commodity prices, which have been sliding since 2014, said Langemeier, adding that farm liquidity has been declining "rather dramatically" over the past few years.

Though farm loans in general still have a lower delinquency rate than mortgages and even auto loans, they have been going up, said Brady Brewer, who also is an agricultural economist at Purdue.

Non-performing agricultural loans have now risen to about 1.42 percent, said Brewer, citing Federal Reserve statistics. Though that's still very low by historical standards, it is about the highest it's been in the past 10 years, he explained, and a national survey of bankers indicates that 52 percent of those surveyed believe the number of underperforming loans is going to increase this year.

Despite his conservative spending habits, even Enders admits things have been tight.

Just up the road from where the farmers were meeting, a nice assortment of New Holland tractors, combines, sprayers and other equipment are on display at Burnips Equipment Co.

Sales associate Steve Williams said business is brisk for parts, service and even gently used equipment, but soft for the new machinery that can easily cost hundreds of thousands of dollars.

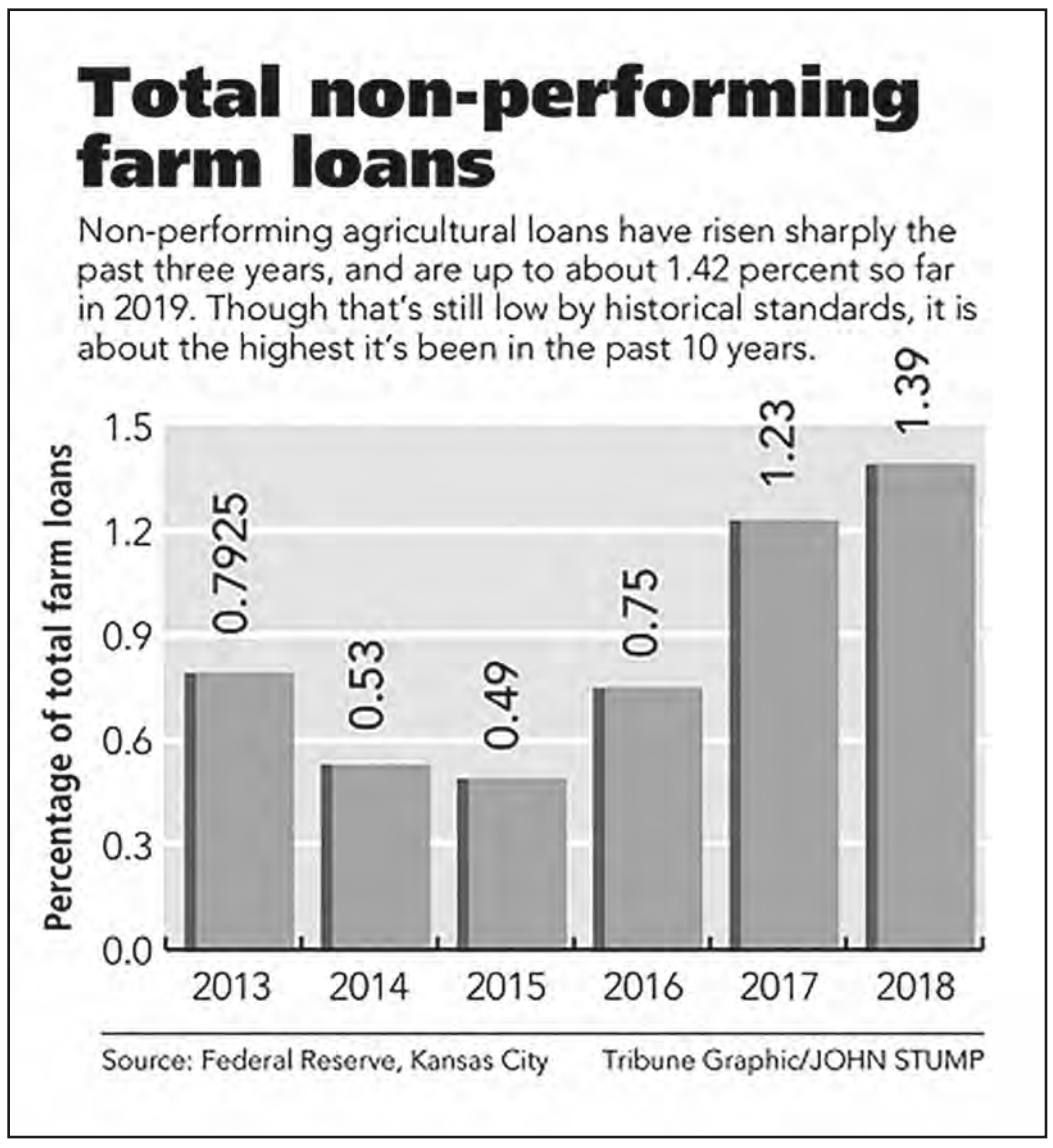
The dealership and other farm-related businesses also have to compete against the rising number of auctions that often include equipment, as well as livestock and even land, as some farms — especially dairies — have gone out of business or are looking for ways to generate some cash.

Though farmers are always hopeful this time of year as they get ready for planting, the lengthy downturn could continue another couple of years, according to the agricultural economists.

One of the few positives from the past few years is that land prices have remained relatively stable, meaning that farmers can continue to go to the well to borrow against the value of their land.

Though soybean provides better margins than corn, the crop would be much more profitable to grow if the trade war with China came to an end, said Brewer, adding that elimination of the Chinese tariff would necessarily improve the supply-demand imbalance.

But if the trade war doesn't come to an end, there could be dire consequences for years to come.



These are new combines sitting outside Burnips Equipment Co. in Wyatt. The market for new farm equipment is weak right now because most farmers are struggling to make a profit. (Photo by Robert Franklin)

More than 1,000 teachers and their supporters from across Indiana gathered at the state Capitol on Saturday afternoon to demand higher pay and more school funding, a call they say lawmakers have long ignored.

"Senators, representatives, listen to teachers: Give us the resources we need, give us the professional salary we deserve, and respect our profession," said Connor McNeeley, a member of the union in Perry Township who spoke to the crowd. "What's best for teachers is what's best for students."

The rally, hosted by the Indiana State Teachers Association, the state's largest teachers union, comes as teacher salaries have dominated this year's legislative debates. Indiana teachers have largely not organized more aggressive protests, such as the walkouts or strikes that their peers have recently held in other states. But Saturday's protest was one of the first showings of widespread, unified action by Hoosier educators.

With lines still snaking out doors on both sides of the Statehouse nearly an hour past the scheduled start time, the rotunda was filled with adults and children in red shirts showing their union support. Teachers and their friends and families crowded around two floors of railings overlooking the stage on the main floor, occasionally bursting into loud chants that echoed off the walls and marble floors.

"You've left us no choice, you made us use our teacher voice," they shouted. Other chants were directed at Gov. Eric Holcomb: "Hey Holcomb, do what's right, join us teachers in our fight."

Holcomb and lawmakers have put forth several proposals this year to push more money to teachers, but some educators and education advocates have raised concerns that the plans don't guarantee raises at a time when higher salaries are attracting Indiana teachers to higher-paying states. Instead, under the proposals, local districts would have to choose to add any additional money they get from the state or savings from driving down other costs to teacher paychecks.

Sarah Wintin-Guthrie, a U.S. history and economics teacher at Perry Meridian High School in Indianapolis, came to the rally after running a six-mile race that morning. She said if the state really wants to direct more money to teachers, legislators shouldn't leave it up to chance or the goodwill of district decision-makers.

"As a social studies teacher, I'm a big fan of civic engagement and encouraging that in my students — practice what you preach" Wintin-Guthrie said. "If it's supposed to be for a teacher pay increase, make sure it's for a teacher pay increase."

Although Holcomb and lawmakers have touted their close work this year with teachers unions and teacher-focused advocacy groups, ISTA president Teresa Meredith told rally-goers that it's not enough. Last week, Holcomb said he hoped teachers wouldn't walk out, arguing that he and lawmakers were "not walking out on them, we're walking to them."

"Well I'd say, governor, come closer," Meredith quipped. "We must make more significant strides."

The measures pushed by lawmakers are fairly small compared to the hundreds of millions of dollars likely needed if the state were to give significant raises to teachers statewide. House lawmakers are proposing to preserve a controversial merit-based bonus pool, at $30 million per year. And bills that would offer schools funding for "residencies" to give new teachers more support early on and provide grants for districts that create leadership roles and mentoring opportunities for teachers would be funded with $6 million over two years.

Indiana Democrats have pushed for more dramatic changes, such as giving every teacher in the state a 5 percent raise. Several Democrats were present at the rally, including Rep. Sheila Klinker, from Lafayette, Rep. Melanie Wright, from Yorktown, and Rep. Tonya Pfaff, a new lawmaker from Terre Haute. All three are former or current teachers.

Jackie Morgan, a 42-year-old English teacher from Arsenal Technical High School in Indianapolis Public Schools, said she came to the protest to do her part as a union member and stand up for better pay and more respect for teachers in the state.

"Anything that can help teachers get more pay, more benefits — I know we can't do much because the state has tied our hands," Morgan said. "Whatever I can do to protest, I will."

Indiana hate crimes bill

U.S. civil rights leaders: State bias crimes bill falls short

By SCOTT L. MILEY
CNHI Statehouse Bureau

INDIANAPOLIS — National civil rights leaders sent a letter Thursday to Gov. Eric Holcomb and legislative leaders saying that the General Assembly's current bias crimes legislation won't remove Indiana from a list of states without a law.

As the current bill has no list of characteristics often subject to bias, Holcomb has suggested that federal language be used by the state.

However, House Speaker Brian Bosma, R-Indianapolis, said Thursday he thinks the language should be developed by state legislators, not federal.

The 30 civil rights activists, including including the Anti-Defamation League, the Human Rights Campaign, the NAACP and the Southern Poverty Law Center, said that legislation must include a specific, comprehensive list of characteristics, such as race, gender and sexual orientation, to get Indiana off the list of five states without a bias crimes law.

"Some opponents of an Indiana bias crime law continue to erroneously argue that specifying categories in legislation will lend 'special statuses' to minorities. This notion is simply false," the letter states. "Inclusive hate crime statutes are designed to cover everyone; anyone intentionally targeted because of their personal characteristics would be protected in a hate crime statute which includes enumerated categories."

The letter was released by Indiana Forward, which is pushing for a list of characteristics that could provoke bias in a crime.

Senate Bill 12 was stripped of a list in the Indiana Senate. The Senate voted 39-10 to send the amended bill to the House, where it has been assigned to the Courts and Criminal Code Committee. After the Senate passed the bill, Holcomb, who is seeking a comprehensive bill, suggested that federal descriptions be implemented in state language. The list should be used by judges in the sentencing phase of a criminal case, not in the initial reporting of the crime, Holcomb said.

He said in a statement, "Under federal law, criminal acts committed because of a person's actual or perceived race, color, religion, national origin, disability, sex, gender, gender identity, sexual orientation or because the person was engaged in a federally protected activity (voting, jury service, etc.) can be charged as hate crimes. This applies right now in the State of Indiana, and what I would suggest is that we take that exact language."

Bosma said Thursday he would rather have the state be in charge of the language.

"I don't know that we want to reference federal law," Bosma said. "There is a state definition of a bias crime now. If there was going to be any type of reference, I would presume it would likely be to state law rather than federal. I know he's (Holcomb) shopping options, which is good. As of 2000, the state has defined a bias crime as "an offense in which the person who committed the offense knowingly or intentionally: (a) selected the person who was injured; or (b) damaged or otherwise affected property by the offense because of the color, creed, disability, national origin, race, religion, or sexual orientation of the injured person or of the owner or occupant of the affected property was associated with any other recognizable group or affiliation."

Earlier this week, the 100-company Indiana Technology and Innovation Association, which formed in November, urged a comprehensive list for the bill.

Existing law already has provisions for judges to make work

If you believe everything you read in the media throughout Indiana, you may think our General Assembly is led by a Republican majority of racist, homophobic legislators.

The topic is a hate crimes bill making its way through the Indiana Legislature in an effort from Democrats and others caught up in the hysteria of identity politics to make us like the majority of other states with hate crimes laws.

We've written here previously that Indiana law already has provisions for judges to enhance sentences for any victim of crimes of bias, and that a more targeted hate crimes law may discriminate in favor of politically favored victims due to race, religion, sexual orientation or gender.

Indiana lawmakers began the second half of the legislative session this week with more than 400 bills still alive, including Senate Bill 12 on hate crimes, which is heading to the House.

Gov. Eric Holcomb and the Indiana business community have been pushing for a detailed and inclusive hate crimes law.

The Senate advanced SB 12 by a 39-10 vote nearly two weeks ago, but not before passing an amendment that stripped a list of specific protected groups.

Opponents of the amendment argue that specificity is crucial to a hate crimes law. But we say a more general law will protect everyone.

Holcomb said the amended bill fails to get Indiana off the list of five states without a bias crime law.

But we agree with Micah Clark, executive director of the American Family Association of Indiana, who argues that while "almost every headline and news story implies that their favored groups lost protections," the fact is that SB 12 "now protects everyone.

"Rather than limit a judge's ability to extend a sentence in such a crime to a list of politically favored victim categories," Clark writes, "the Senate affirmed a 2005 state Supreme Court ruling giving judges the widest latitude possible. It was a strong statement for equal justice under the law, rather than stooping to the identity politics that divides our nation."

Clark insists we should never have been included on the list of states without hate crimes laws because under Indiana Code 10-13-3-1, such legislation has been part of Indiana law since 2003:

"Bias crime" Sec. 1. As used in this chapter, "bias crime" means an offense in which the person who commits the offense knowingly or intentionally: (1) selected the person who was injured; or (2) damaged or otherwise affected property; by the offense because of the color, creed, disability, national origin, race, religion, or sexual orientation of the injured person or owner or occupant of the affected property was associated with any other recognizable group or affiliation. As added by P.L. 2 – 2003.

Abdul Hakim-Shabazz, an attorney and the editor and publisher of IndyPolitics.Org, also cited the Indiana code as an answer to the "problem" of not including a list in SB 12. He argues that "the 'list' in the reporting statute could actually help resolve that problem by just making a reference to it in the pending legislation. It is not uncommon for one part of a statute to refer to a provision in another statute."

Indiana law already protects anyone who might be the victim of a bias or hate crime. We applaud the Senate for recognizing this, and trust that the House will follow suit when it takes up the bill in the remainder of this year's session.

Purdue emphasizes it is not Purdue Pharma

By DAVE BANGERT
(Lafayette) Journal and Courier

WEST LAFAYETTE – In December 2017, when Lafayette joined the parade of cities and communities suing a dozen manufacturers and distributors of opioids, a call came to the newsroom from a well-placed friend of Purdue University.

"Don't you think," he pleaded, "you could do something to make it clear that it's not that Purdue?"

At issue: Purdue Pharma, the New York-based pharmaceutical company behind OxyContin, was among those firms being sued for its role in instigating what municipalities – Lafayette, West Lafayette and Tippecanoe County – say is an addiction crisis sapping community resources.

That same sort of plea came, again, this week from the West Lafayette campus, after Purdue Pharma landed in the headlines, on news that the company might go bankrupt as a way to deal with the mounting liability of more than 1,500 lawsuits.

The statement, emailed to any media outlet that would listen:

"Purdue University is not and has never been affiliated in any way with Purdue Pharma. The pharmaceutical company was founded in Manhattan in 1892 by John Purdue Gray and George Frederick Bingham as the Purdue Frederick Company. Purdue University was founded in 1869 as Indiana's land-grant institution, named for benefactor John Purdue."

Tim Doty, a Purdue University spokesman, said that statement isn't necessarily new. And he said it wasn't prompted by calls from the media looking for the university's reaction about dealings at Purdue Pharma. But second references in national media that simply call the pharmaceutical company "Purdue" can cause heartburn on the West Lafayette campus.

"We just have that on standby," Doty said Friday. "We put it out there whenever you see Purdue Pharma getting some press. … We can't control what people write. We just want people do know that it's not connected in anyway, and we hope some people will think to include that."

The statement, issued Thursday, was passed around quite a bit on social media, some among the Purdue faithful and others sarcastically asking whether the same went for Perdue Farms Inc. and its chickens.

"At least some people saw it," Doty said. "Maybe it will stick."

That paragraph, distancing Purdue from Purdue Pharma, is on deck, just in case.

Evansville-based firm announces $6.5B acquisition of plastics design company

By JOSH JENKINS
Evansville Courier & Press

EVANSVILLE — Evansville-based Berry Global announced Friday its intent to acquire RPC Group Plc, an international design and engineering company.

A news release from Berry said the $6.5 billion acquisition would create a global plastic and recycled packaging product franchise. The combined company will have revenue of about $13 billion and some 48,000 employees across six continents.

RPC provides plastic and recycled products for packaging, focusing on rigid and flexible packaging. The company is positioned prominently across a range of consumer, industrial, and healthcare end markets, according to the release.

RPC is supported by 153 manufacturing locations and has commercial presences in 33 countries. The company employs approximately 25,000 and serves more than 10,000 customers.

For the 12-month period that ended Sept. 30, 2018, RPC generated net sales and adjusted EBITDA of $4.8 billion and $768 million, respectively.

"We are extremely excited about the opportunity to welcome the team and global capabilities of RPC to the Berry organization," said Tom Salmon, Chairman and CEO of Berry. "We are highly impressed by the tremendous depth of talent and resources embedded within RPC, and are looking forward to the opportunity to strengthen our combined platform with the wealth of experience and expertise this team has to offer.

"We believe this transaction will further enhance the long-term outlook for our business and will provide a unique value creation opportunity for our shareholders. We plan to leverage our combined know-how in material science, product development, supply chain and manufacturing technologies across resin-based applications to integrate quickly and build a best-in-class organization."

According to the release, the board of directors of RPC has unanimously recommended the superior offer by Berry. The proposed transaction, which is subject to closing conditions, is expected to close early in the third quarter of calendar year 2019.

Berry said it has secured a fully-committed debt financing package to fund the transaction and expects to generate approximately $150 million of annual cost synergies.

the time," Junior said of joining the club some seven or eight years ago. "...I had to take my wife to her meetings, and they asked me what I thought of making quilts and I said anyone can make quilts."

The ladies gave him a bag of squares and a chance to prove his confidence, adding, "if you know so much, put them together."

"And I did," Junior said. "And it was sold at the next auction."

Many days Junior has spent in his workshop, working at each delicate seam. So much so that, even though he never chose to quit smoking, it has forced him to limit his daily intake to just three or four.

"He hasn't planned on quitting, but it has slowed him up," Kay said. "Since (he) has so much hand work and because dropping ash may burn holes in the quilt, he just doesn't smoke."

"This was a pocket and this was inside the pocket," Junior explained, motioning toward the various blue jean blues throughout his quilt. "...That's the time consuming (part) of it is taking all the stitching out of the blue jeans."

It takes a lot of blue jeans to make a quilt, so much so that Junior has worn out two seam rippers from cutting off so many zippers "and things."

His wife said he takes the leftover zippers and pocket patches and either makes small purses or sells them at the annual homemakers quilt show. So far, Junior has made about eight quilts or "something like that."

One year, Kay said, he donated some to groups to help ensure kids get Christmas.

Junior's quilts are heavy. He explained, "it feels like you need someone to pick it up so you can just turn over. It's warm."

Unlike this year's homemakers community quilt — and the quilting standards the group has presented — Junior's quilts do not use an internal padding. Instead, it is just quilted blue jean patches with a thermal backing.

"I worked for a month putting one of these in," Junior said, touching one of the orange circles at the heart of his pattern.

"I try to stay out of his way,..." Kay said, explaining that she removes herself to another room. "If he yells, sometimes I go in and help him. Sometimes he has issues with color and I'll help him between the dark and light ones. And I help him pin it too."

Junior explained that he does not like using pins and needles; instead, he uses clamps because he pricks himself too often.

And even though Junior sees himself as an amateur quilter now after eight or so years, he said he still hasn't been confronted about selling any of his work yet, though the homemakers drawing dinner did sell one of his to his daughter.

Each year, a team from the homemakers produces one prized quilt to be raffled at its annual 4-H Fairgrounds dinner, while others are presented alongside it. The money raised from the raffle goes directly toward the organization's annual scholarship program, which funnels into three seniors, one each from Madison Consolidated, Shawe Memorial and Southwestern high schools.

So far, Junior has not participated in the community quilt project. But, he has produced quilts for the show and does plan to participate in this year's raffle on April 13th at 5 p.m.

"They showed my quilt in the paper, and they said, was that a winner?" Junior humorously said. "And I didn't even get a runner-up."

"That means he didn't even vote for himself," his wife added.

"Someone told me long ago, if you keep busy you'll live longer," Junior said. "When you retire you can't just sit down, you have to be alive."

And for Junior, that means staying as busy as possible. Surprisingly enough, there is still one thing this man can't do.

"We are all good cooks, but don't ask him to cook," Kay said of her husband as he replied, "I'd starve to death if I had to make my own dinner."

But, "he had to learn how to make coffee."

who have committed to serve in the armed forces after training— and those who do military residencies account for much of the staff serving troops overseas. A major deployment could leave the military flat-footed, said Dr. John Prescott, a former Army physician.

"The majority of folks in the military don't stay in for their whole career, they stay in for a few years," Prescott said. "I'm concerned there will be a very small cohort that will be available for deployment in the future."

The military health system is responsible for more than 1.4 million active-duty and 331,000 reserve personnel, with 54 hospitals and 377 military clinics around the world. Split among the Navy, Army and Air Force, each with its own doctors and hospitals, the service has been targeted for years for overhaul to reduce redundancies and save costs.

The department has already started moving administrative functions under one bureaucracy, called the Defense Health Agency, which is slated to take over the service branch hospitals in 2021.

The budget for the next fiscal year is still being developed and final decisions have not yet been made, a Department of Defense spokeswoman, Lt. Col. Carla Gleason, said in an email. "Any reforms that do result will be driven by the Department's efforts to ensure our medical personnel are ready to provide battlefield care in support of our forces, and to provide the outstanding medical benefits that Service members, retirees and their families deserve," she said.

For years, critics of the broad role of the military health services have argued that many medical corps services — such as maternity care and pediatrics on bases — could be provided more effectively by civilian doctors and hospitals.

But Lane said there is too much focus on the high-profile trauma cases on the battlefield "that at the end of the day are a small portion" of medical care. "When we're trying to put things back together that got broken during a war," he said, "that's what you need the most of — pediatricians, public health doctors, primary care doctors."

Some studies commissioned by the department have concluded private hospitals could deliver less costly care, in part because doctors at hospitals take care of more patients. But the Congressional Budget Office said savings were not at all certain and that military hospitals might be less expensive if the government arranged for greater use of them.

Brad Carson and Morgan Plummer, who held senior jobs in the Department of Defense during President Barack Obama's administration, argued in a 2016 essay that the military isn't the best training for surgeons because it doesn't provide them with a sufficient number of cases to develop expertise.

The military health system "has too much infrastructure, the wrong mix of providers, and predominantly serves the needs of beneficiaries who could easily have their health care needs satisfied by civilian providers at far less cost and with equal or better quality," they wrote.

The government this year is spending $50 billion on the military health system, including Tricare insurance for more than 9 million active-duty service members, veterans, families and survivors, according to Congress' budget office. That is roughly a tenth of the military budget. The CBO projected costs are on track to increase to $63 billion in 2033.

Defenders of the system reject the idea that non-wartime jobs can be eliminated without it hurting that core mission.

"Military health care providers between deployments maintain their clinical skills by treating service members and millions of beneficiaries," Dr. Arthur Kellermann, dean of the school of medicine at the Uniformed Services University in Bethesda, wrote in a 2017 Health Affairs article. "Military hospitals provide valuable platforms for teaching the next generation of uniformed health care professionals and standby capacity for combat casualties."

Prescott, the former Army doctor, said that the military may have trouble turning to civilian doctors in some regions given physician shortages, which he said the military cuts would exacerbate.

"Most hospitals are already pretty full, most health care providers are pretty busy," said Prescott, now chief academic officer at the Association of American Medical Colleges.

Doctor shortages would increase if the military cut the slots it now has to train doctors, because there wouldn't be new civilian residencies created to compensate. "Those positions basically disappear," he said.

Kathryn Beasley, a retired Navy captain who is director of government relations for health affairs at the Military Officers Association of America, said she was also concerned with unforeseen consequences of dramatic cuts.

"Everything's tied together, there's a lot of interdependencies in these things," she said. "You pull a string on one and you might feel it in an area you don't expect."

No. 1 Rebels Ousted

Rebels' high-scoring offense crashes in 54-48 regional setback to Tell City

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

PAOLI — Southwestern's dynamic high-scoring offense has carried the Rebels to tremendous heights this season only to abandoned the Rebels at the worst possible time Saturday.

Class 2 No. 1 Southwestern saw its spectacular season come to a crashing end in a 54-48 loss to 11th-ranked Tell City in the IHSAA basketball regional semifinals at Paoli.

The Rebels, who were held to under 60 points for just the third time this season, couldn't hit shots regardless of where they were on the floor. They missed from near the baskets and they missed from beyond the arc. They even missed shots at the free-throw line, something they rarely do.

That catastrophic shooting display overshadowed a strong overall defensive performance and ended Southwestern's hopes at a deeper tournament run.

"We missed enough layups and free throws to determine the game," Southwestern coach Jerry Bomholt said. "We shot the heck out of it yesterday, we shot the heck out of it in pre-game warmups. Sometimes you just don't know. We missed a lot of opportunities."

At no point during the game was Southwestern comfortable on the offensive end. Tell City's aggressive man-to-man defense hounded the Rebels from the opening tip and nearly every shot they took was contested.

As a result, Southwestern was never comfortable and led only once, at 2-0 on Zach Cole's layup a minute into the game before spending the entire 32 minutes trying to go on a run that would finally put the game away.

"(Tell City) was very aggressive and the man-to-man bothered us," Southwestern senior Hunter Mefford said. "And it was really physical. We could never get anything going."

Despite Southwestern's offensive woes, Tell City never truly put the game away and it wasn't until the final moments that it became apparent the Rebels were not going to be able to execute a comeback.

The Marksmen (21-6) got off very few shots against Southwestern's 1-2-2 zone, but Tell City made the most of its chances and, as a result, led 9-7 after the first quarter and 20-16 at halftime.

Southwestern, which has made a habit this season of blitzing teams coming out of the lockerroom to start the third quarter, nearly did so again on Saturday. After giving up an early basket to Tell City's Spencer Fest, the Rebels ripped off six-straight points to tie the game at 22-22 on a pair of Mefford free throws.

But even that small bit of momentum didn't last. Despite a steal on the next possession, Southwestern promptly turned the ball back over and the Marksmen turned it into points. Tell City eased back out to a 33-28 lead after the third quarter.

"We played an outstanding game on defense. We threw everything we had at them and I think we forced more turnovers on them than a lot of people have," Bomholt said. "But every time we turned them over, we gave the ball right back or we missed a shot. A missed shot is really no different than a turnover because you're giving it right back."

— Former Trimble County basketball standout and Kentucky All Star Kaylee Clifford and her Kentucky Wesleyan Panthers have earned an at-large bid in the NCAA Division II National Tournament after finishing as runner-up at last weekend's Great Midwest Athletic Conference women's basketball tournament in North Canton, Ohio.

Clifford, a sophomore guard, scored a team-high 19 points with four rebounds in 28 minutes of action in Wesleyan's 84-68 championship game loss to Walsh. She was 6-for-10 from the field, 3-for-4 from behind the arc and 4-for-4 at the free-throw line. Wesleyan trailed just 44-42 at halftime and 64-59 after three quarters before Walsh rolled 30-9 in the fourth.

Kentucky wesleyan, 24-7 overall, 18-4 in the G-MAC and 16-0 at home, will play at top-ranked Drury (31-0) on Friday in the Midwest Regional opener at Springfield, Missouri. The winner of that game will will meet the Ashland (29-2) vs. Northern Michigan (22-9) winner in the Midwest Regional semifinals. All times are to be determined.

NCAA Indoor Championships

Hanover's Sheryak 10th in heptathlon, Engineers' Palmer 14th in pole vault

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Hanover's Joe Sheryak completed his historic performance at the NCAA Division III Indoor National Championships with a 10th-place finish in the men's heptathlon Saturday in Boston, Massachusetts.

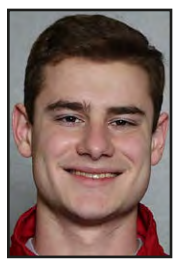
Sheryak, a senior from Greenwood, completed the final three events of the seven-leg heptathlon on Saturday, accumulating 2,123 points on Day Two to finish with 4,807 for the meet. The senior broke his previous school record mark of 4,761 points, set the just a week earlier at the Ohio Northern Final Qualifier in Ada to make him the first male athlete at Hanover to qualify for the NCAA national championships.

"Joe made history today," Hanover track & field coach Brian Power said. "He went from being the first national qualifier in program history to finishing 10th in the country."

Day Two began with the 60-meter hurdles where the senior clocked in at 9.19 seconds for 704 points. His highest finish of the day came in the pole vault, where he cleared 4.25 meters to place eighth overall and earn another 688 points.

Sheryak closed out the meet by placing third in his heat and 10th overall in the 1000-meter run, using a strong kick at the finish to post a time of 2:53.37and earn 731 more points, his best total of the day.

Sheryak



Palmer

Sheryak had opened the meet Friday morning by tying his personal-best time in the 60-meter dash in 7.36 seconds to place 12th overall and third in his heat and pick up a Day One-best and overall best 759 points.

Sheryak then rallied from a foul on his second attempt in the long jump to post a 6.57-meter jump on his final attempt for seventh overall and third in his flight for another 713 points and followed that with a personal record in the shot put on his first attempt with a toss of 11.22 meters that was good enough for 10th overall and 559 points. Sheryak final even on Friday was a 10th place finish overall in the high jump where he cleared 1.83 meters — just two centimeters shy of tying his personal-best in the event — for another 653 points to close out the day.

"Joe created some great momentum heading into Day Two," Power said. "He matched his best time in the 60 meters, rallied for a nice score in the long jump and had good looks at a personal-record height in the high jump."

Over the two day event, Sheryak scored better than 700 points in four events and had four top-10 finishes. He entered the week ranked 16th in the country in the heptathlon and jumped six spots in the final national championship standings.

"The combined events require a unique balance of speed, agility and endurance," Power said. "There are not many athletes that have that ability."

Meanwhile, former Madison Cub track and field standout Nick Palmer was competing at the NCAA pole vault where he finished 14th overall competing for Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology.

Palmer wrapped up competition on Friday afternoon — his first trip to the NCAA indoor championships — when he cleared 4.75 meters (15-feet, 1-inches). Palmer had cleared 4.45 and 4.60 in his progression before hitting at 4.75 and failing in three attempts at 4.85. The national champion in the pole vault was crowned Friday when North Central senior Luke Winder maxed out at 5.53 meters (18-feet, 1.5 inches), a mark that was .23 higher that his qualifier.

A senior and six-time USTFCCCA All-Region performer, Palmer had qualified 13th for the NCAA meet with a 15-foot, 9 3/4-inch vault set in February when he won the Heartland Collegiate Athletic Conference championship at Defiance (Ohio) College. He had finished as the HCAC's pole vault runner-up four times prior to this season in both indoor and outdoor competition.

Sheryak, along with the rest of the Hanover men's and women's track & field teams, will now turn their attention to the outdoor season. The Panthers are slated to begin the outdoor campaign on Friday at the Murray State (Ky.)-hosted Margaret Simmons Invitational. Palmer will also turn his focus toward his final outdoor season at Rose-Hulman where the Fighting' Engineers will host their own Early Bird meet on March 16 in Terre Haute.

Hanover's lacrosse men beat Muskingum for third straight win

Hanover's men's lacrosse team knocked off Muskingum (Ohio) 12-7 on Saturday for the Panthers' third-straight win.

Hanover tallied three or more goals in each of the first three quarters and had six different players score in the win. Dallas Fonner, a junior from Evansville, and Ian Kimmins, a sophomore from Dayton, Ohio, tied for the team high in goals with three each, with Fonner also dishing out one assist.

Noah King added two goals and five assists for a team-high seven points while Jackson Wheeler had two goals and one assist.

Kimmins scored less than 20 seconds into the game off a pass from Fonner to get Hanover off to a kick start. King and Wheeler each scored near the end of the first quarter as the Panthers led 3-1 after 15 minutes of play.

Hanover outscored Muskingum 4-1 in the second on two more goals by Kimmins and markers by Fonner and Wheeler for a 7-2 lead.

Al Alessia, who assisted on two goals in the first half, was the first player in the second half to find the back of the net, giving Hanover an 8-2 advantage at the 12:36 mark of the third period. The Panthers led by as many as six on two occasions, once on the Alessia goal and again after Fonner scored a man-up at 10:04 in the third, making the score 9-3.

Muskingum (2-2) rallied for the remainder of the period but a goal from Patrick Boylston assisted in a four-score advantage for Hanover. King added another goal for the final margin.

Noah Dubrav, a junior from Centerville, Ohio, notched a season-high 17 saves in goal, including 12 in the second half. The junior now has 12 games in his collegiate career with 15-plus stops. Classmate Eric Clay paced the Panthers with nine groundballs, while Dirk Meinhart added five groundballs and one assist.

The Panthers enjoyed a 13-for-23 edge in face-offs. Bret Schell was 7-for-13 and Justin Wilson was 4-for-6 to lead the Panthers.

Hanover, now 3-1 on the season, will look to continue its winning ways when the team opens Heartland Collegiate Lacrosse Conference play at Transylvania on Wednesday.

SNOW THROWS: Hanover track and field sophomore thrower Erin Browning, of Greensburg, practiced the discus last week in the snow under the watchful eye of assistant coach James Hautman. The college indoor track and field season wrapped up last weekend with nationals and teams are beginning to transition to the outdoor season. Hanover's first outdoor meet of the season is Friday at Murray State (Ky.) University where the weather is exected to be considerably more spring-like. (Staff photo by Mark Campbell)

All-Star Scooter Gennett unsure of future with Reds but he'd love to stay with Cincy

By GARY SCHATZ
Associated Press

GOODYEAR, Ariz. — Scooter Gennett is unsure of his future with the Cincinnati Reds even though he's coming off one of the best two-year showings in franchise history.

Gennett can become a free agent after this season, his third season in Cincinnati. The Reds acquired several other players who also are in the final years on their contracts in a series of trades to try to dig out of last place. Gennett would love to stay in the city where his career took off, but the Reds haven't offered a deal.

So the second baseman has to see how the season plays out heading into July, when the Reds might be tempted to trade some of their potential free agents if they're not in contention in the NL Central. Gennett said there are no ongoing talks with the club.

"There hasn't been much interaction," Gennett said. "We weren't going to figure anything out before spring training. It is not the right time for them. It's not like they don't know I want to be here. It's not like I don't know they want me to be here."

"There hasn't been much interaction. We weren't going to figure anything out before spring training. It is not the right time for them. It's not like they don't know I want to be here. It's not like I don't know they want me to be here."
Scooter Gennett on contract negotiations with the Cincinnati Reds

For now, he is one of the Reds' most valuable players on offense.

They claimed him off waivers from the Brewers a day before they broke camp for the 2017 season. Gennett adjusted his swing and had a career year. He became the first major leaguer to have four homers, five hits and 10 RBIs in a game. He also led the majors with four grand slams, joining Lou Gehrig as the only players with a four-homer game and a four-grand slam season.

He kept it up last season, becoming an All-Star for the first time. His ninth-inning, pinch-hit homer sent the All-Star game to extra innings. Gennett finished second to Milwaukee's Christian Yelich for the batting crown with a .310 average.

In the last two years, Gennett has 50 homers and 189 RBIs, joining Dave Parker and Deron Johnson as the only Reds to put up such numbers in their first two seasons with Cincinnati. He's the only second baseman in Reds history with eight homers and 24 RBIs in a month — he's done it twice.

After making $5.7 million last season, he avoided arbitration and settled for a one-year deal for $9,775,000. Gennett, who turns 29 in May, has gotten no hints about how the Reds see him long-term.

"It's just a weird time," he said. "At some point in the future we can get that question answered."

The Reds are coming off four straight seasons with at least 94 losses, prompting them to make a flurry of trades that overhauled their rotation and their outfield. The infield is intact from last season, with Joey Votto at first base, Gennett at second, Jose Peraza at shortstop Eugenio Suarez at third and Tucker Barnhart behind the plate.

Gennett is encouraged by the team's new look.

"It's going great," he said. "I'm not the only one who thinks that. It's just a really good atmosphere."

BUBBLE WATCH

Horns, Hoosiers need wins to insure NCAA tourney bid

By AARON BEARD
AP Basketball Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. — Texas and Indiana own records that don't look much like those of NCAA Tournament teams at first glance.

Yet the Longhorns and Hoosiers are still chasing at-large bids thanks to a peculiar mix of multiple resume-boosting wins amid all those losses that have left both hovering near .500 overall.

It's a year in which the bubble is filled with teams holding fragile resumes, helping keep Texas (16-14, 8-9 Big 12) and Indiana (16-14, 7-12 Big Ten) alive even amid some ugly stretches of the schedule.

Look no further than their Quadrant 1 wins for the reason. Those victories account for the top tier of wins on any resume designed to give greater weight to tougher opponents or winning away from home.

Shaka Smart's Longhorns sit at No. 34 as of Friday in the new NET rankings, which is the more analytical formula replacing the RPI in the selection committee's work to build this year's field of 68 teams. Texas is 5-9 in Quadrant 1 games with four wins against current AP Top 25 teams: No. 3 North Carolina on a neutral court, No. 11 Purdue at home, No. 13 Kansas at home and No. 18 Kansas State on the road.

Then there is the Hoosiers' wild ride since the start of 2019.

Indiana lost seven straight games in January, only to end that streak by beating current No. 9 Michigan State. Then came five straight losses, only to see the Hoosiers respond with a double-overtime win against No. 21 Wisconsin, another win against the Spartans to sweep the season series and Thursday's win at Illinois.

Indiana also has wins against No. 16 Marquette and Louisville, giving the Hoosiers to six Quadrant 1 victories — two more than top-ranked Gonzaga — and a No. 50 NET ranking.

"We're definitely playing better than we were," Indiana coach Archie Miller said after the Illinois win. "Even in some of our losses here in the last couple of weeks, we've been playing better. Hard-fought games, we've been in a lot of them. But I feel like our team right now is in a position that we've earned some confidence back."

Texas looks to be on the right side of the bubble according to BracketMatrix.com's average of numerous tournament projections. The Longhorns appeared on 87 of 92 mock brackets as of Friday morning, checking in at a No. 10 seed.

The Hoosiers are listed among BracketMatrix.com's first four teams out and appear on 22 mock brackets.

They're both down to their final chances to improve their resumes. Texas hosts TCU on Saturday before playing in the Big 12 Tournament in Kansas City, Missouri. Indiana hosts Rutgers on Sunday before the Big Ten Tournament in Chicago.

ON THE RISE

Clemson: The Tigers (18-12, 8-9 Atlantic Coast Conference, No. 40 NET) are doing just enough to hang around by winning three of four entering Saturday's finale against Syracuse — though they are just 1-9 against Quadrant 1 teams.

Oklahoma: The Sooners (19-11, 7-10 Big 12, No. 39 NET) have won four of five — including against Kansas — and can help themselves by winning Saturday at Kansas State.

Central Florida: The Knights (23-6, 13-4 American Athletic Conference, No. 26 NET) likely locked up a bid by going on the road to beat No. 12 Houston followed by Thursday's home win against No. 20 Cincinnati.

Utah State: The Aggies (25-6, 15-3 Mountain West Conference, No. 30 NET) claimed at least a share of the league regular-season title with seven straight wins, including against No. 17 Nevada.

FADING HOPES

Alabama: The Crimson Tide (17-13, 8-9 Southeastern Conference, No. 57 NET) looked solid in early February, but have lost five of seven entering Saturday's trip to Arkansas.

Florida: After entering March with five straight wins, the Gators (17-13, 9-8 SEC, No. 33 NET) suffered a Quadrant 3 loss at home to Georgia last weekend then couldn't get a resume-helping win against No. 10 LSU on Wednesday.

N.C. State: The Wolfpack (20-10, 8-9 ACC, No. 35 NET) had a bad stumble with Wednesday's home loss to Georgia Tech. That gave N.C. State as many Quadrant 3 losses (two) as Quadrant 1 wins after playing one of the nation's softest nonconference schedules.

St. John's: The Red Storm (20-10, 8-9 Big East, No. 62 NET) have five Quadrant 1 wins, but they've lost three of four and have three Quadrant 3 losses.

•Rebels

The Rebels missed a lot of shots, a total of 25 of them from the floor, and those misses piled up in the fourth quarter as Tell City built a 10-point lead on three different occasions, the last with 3:12 left in the game.

Southwestern battled back, getting a 3-pointer from Tyler Kramer and a layup by Foster Mefford to close the gap to five (46-41) with 2:12 to go, but the Rebels got no closer. Southwestern was just 7-of-18 from the floor in the fourth quarter and 4-of-8 from the free-throw line down the stretch, killing the Rebels' momentum.

A pair of Braeden Beard free throws with 25 seconds left and a Trent Arnold freebie moments later gave Tell City a 9-point lead (54-45) to essentially clinch the game. Kramer drilled a 3-pointer just before the buzzer for the final 54-48 margin.

Other than turnovers — Southwestern made only five — there was no favorable stat for the Rebels. They shot 39 percent (16-for-41) overall, but just 4-of-14 (29 percent) from beyond the arc and 12-of-20 (60 percent) from the free-throw line. That coupled with a 33-20 rebounding deficit was too much to overcome.

"You look back on the game and you think that surely that we could find six points. We're usually a better shooting team than that and we shoot 80 percent from the line as a team," Bomholt said. "We missed a lot of layups but I would say that there was a lot of contact on those layups that wasn't called. Our game is driving the ball to the basket and if they're going to allow the other team to grab up and bump you as you go by, there's not a lot that we can do."

Tyler Kramer was the focus of Tell City's defense all day but still managed a team-high 17 points on 6-of-15 shooting. The senior ended his spectacular high school career with 1,656 points — second-highest in school history and sixth-best in Jefferson County history.

Foster Mefford managed 14 points on 5-of-10 shooting while Cole had eight points and Hunter Mefford scored seven. Matthew Williams, who entered the game averaging over 16 points per game, was held to two on just 1-of-3 shooting from the floor.

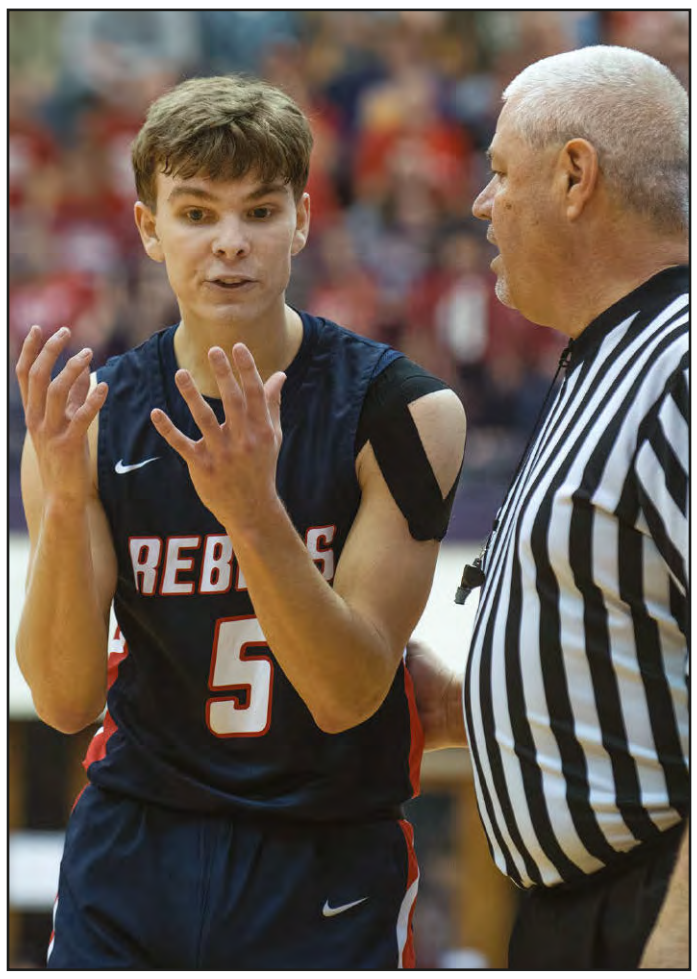
Beard, a 6-foot-5 senior forward, picked up a double-double of 21 points and 15 rebounds to lead Tell City while Arnold scored 13. The Marksmen were an even 50 percent (20-for-40) from the floor, but just 2-of-10 on 3-pointers.

Linton-Stockton, ranked eighth, battled back from a 13-point fourth-quarter deficit to stun No. 9 Paoli 72-71 on a last-second shot in the first semifinal. The Miners then defeated Tell City 45-36 to win the regional and advance to the final four.

The loss ends the best season in Southwestern boys basketball history which saw the Rebels win a school-record 25 games and their eighth sectional title. It also ends the careers of seniors Tyler Kramer and Hunter Mefford who helped lead the Rebels to a 49-5 record the past two years.

"I just told the guys in the lockerroom that they should be proud of what they have accomplished. Those two guys have meant the world to this program and they have brought it from a place that four years ago wasn't that good," Bomholt said. "But we have some pretty good guys coming back and that group has a chance to be just as good or even better. The future is bright."

"I'm going to miss playing with these guys. I love every single one of them. My teammates are just amazing," said Mefford, holding back tears. "But I can't wait to come back and cheer on my brother and the rest of the guys because I know they're going to be right back here next year."



FOUL: Southwestern's Hunter Mefford (above) questions a call during Saturday's Class 2A Paoli Regional loss to Tell City and Zach Cole (right) lays out while drawing an offensive foul on Tell City's Braeden Beard. Demonstrating their STEM learning

Representatives from several local STEM-related industry leaders and employers participated in this year's STEM roundtable event at Shawe Memorial Jr./Sr. High School on Friday. They watched student presentations and demonstrations, asked questions about the projects and the students' processes and offered advice or solutions to different challenges the students faced. Students in grades 8 to 12 participated in this year's demonstrations. (Courier staff photos by Tali Hunt/thunt@madisoncourier.com)

Shawe's fourth level engineering class (from left: Bryan Avalos, Kate Grote, Lauren Lundergan and Matthew Binzer) decided they would design a wheelchair/walker prototype for individuals who need to use both pieces of equipment but struggle to always have both readily available for use when they need to switch.

By TALI HUNT

Members from local industry watched student presentations and demonstrations Friday at this year's annual STEM roundtable at Shawe Memorial Jr./Sr. High School.

Students in grades 8 to 12 participated in this year's demonstrations. Their topics were Tiny Houses and Inventor Pieces, Gene Therapy, Scratch and Python Programs, Programmed Audrino Bo-Bot with Arena and Programmed Raspberry Pi, Chemistry in Power Production and Prototype of Wheelchair/Walker Conversion.

Throughout the presentations, students talked about the process they experienced with their project — successes and failures and lessons learned for the future. The industry representatives asked questions about processes and sometimes offered advice for the students for the future.

STEM stands for science, technology, engineering and math, and schools are offering more courses with these focuses to help prepare students for STEM-related careers.

Shawe's program for the roundtable stated:

"STEM education creates critical thinkers, increases science literacy, and enables the next generation of innovators. Innovation leads to new products and processes that sustain our economy. This innovation and science literacy depends on a solid knowledge base in the STEM areas. It is clear that most jobs of the future will require a basic understanding of math and science. Ten-year employment projections by the U.S. Department of Labor show that of the 20 fastest growing occpuations projected for 2017, 15 of them require significant mathematics or science preparation."

Quilting for scholarships

Arnold "Junior" Dunham holds this year's Jefferson County extension homemakers community quilt. The "Carpenter's Star," as the pattern is called, was machine-pieced by the Smyrna Homemakers last year, quilted by Glenda Schirmer, and constructed by Carol Bell, Meg Bramer, Janet McMahan, Glenda Schirmer, Margie Renschler and Nancy Wilson. There will be a drawing for the quilt April 13 at 5 p.m., at the quilt show at the Jefferson County 4-H Fairgrounds. The money will be used for the organization's annual school scholarships. Newbie left out at work by co-workers

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: At my job, I'm the newbie on the team. The others I work with seem to know one another well, and they chat and make jokes in the office all the time. Meanwhile, some of my teammates are rather passive-aggressive with me. I don't understand why, though. I'm good at my job, and I always put in 110 percent effort. It seems to me that teammates who make more careless errors but are part of the "inside club" get far kinder treatment than I do. I'm a laid-back person and very open and honest, and I just want to be able to talk casually with these co-workers I feel have excluded me. I want to be a part of their fun conversations, but friendship can't be built instantaneously. How do I become more connected to these people and stop feeling so lonely in the office? It hurts to see them laugh with one another while I'm singled out. I've seen a co-worker curse in the office while laughing with another co-worker and then turn to me and speak coldly; it's like a 180-degree switch. Ugh. — The Odd One Out

Dear Odd One Out: If they're intentionally excluding you, you're the better for it. Those aren't the sort of people you should worry about impressing. But I doubt they're acting out of deliberate malice. More likely, you're just the newbie, and it takes time to build rapport at the office. Familiarity with co-workers is earned through years of working together.

Continue being yourself and doing good work, and stop putting so much pressure on the idea of being friends with everyone. You may never end up being super warm and fuzzy with your colleagues, and that would be totally fine. Look at it this way: You'd be able to get more work done while others socialize and to go home and have a healthy social life that's not tangled up in work.

Dear Annie: This is in response to "Mulling Over Memoir," who wishes to record her father's stories. I help people write their memoirs, and there are a few methods I've used that are helpful if the interviewee lives some distance away.

For my own dad, I emailed him a question a day, and he replied with his answer, which I copied and pasted into a growing document. When our online interview was complete, I had amassed an entire memoir with relatively little effort.

If email is not an option, another way to gather stories is telephonically, using a speakerphone and an audio recorder. That way, your hands are free to type what is said, and the recording device captures anything that may have been missed.

I highly recommend a book called "To Our Children's Children," by Bob Greene and D.G. Fulford. It contains hundreds of questions that cover different eras of a person's life, from childhood to grandparenthood.

I hope this helps your readers record their loved ones' stories while there's still time. — Making Memoirs in Michigan

Dear Making Memoirs: These are incredibly useful and practical tips for helping loved ones tell their stories. Thank you for writing.

Dear Annie: I would have added a few more things to the response to "Hurt, Frustrated and Appalled in Florida," whose husband has trouble saying "no" to his adult children and told his daughter she could have her wedding at their house. This is "Hurt, Frustrated and Appalled in Florida's" time to shine and rise above. She should put on a lovely event that everyone will remember. There are easy solutions to all of her concerns. She could move her personal belongings somewhere safe. She could have a port-a-potty or have a designated usher to show guests to the bathroom.

She could frame it differently and have everyone love her for it. — A Wife Also

Dear Wife: Well said. I agree with all your points. Our framing goes a long way toward shaping the picture. Thanks for writing.

"Ask Me Anything: A Year of Advice From Dear Annie" is out now! Annie Lane's debut book – featuring favorite columns on love, friendship, family and etiquette – is available as a paperback and e-book. Visit http://www.creatorspublishing.com for more information. PUBLIC NOTICE-
NOTICE OF DECISION
On March 7, 2019, the Indiana Department of Environmental Management (IDEM) issued permit No. IN LA 000303 to the City of Madison at 101 West Main Street, Madison, IN. This renewal of a Nonsite-Specific Land Application Permit, allows Madison Water Pollution Control Facility to land apply municipal biosolids to agricultural application program, contact Ralph Perry at ////9317) 431-8363 or rwperry@ymail.com.

If you have any questions, regarding the permit process, contact Kate Garvey the environmental manager assigned to this permit, at (317) 233-5552 or KRGarve@idem.IN.gov. The final decision is available online via IDEM's Virtual File Cabinet (VFC). Please go to: http://vfc.idem.in.gov/. You will then have the option to search for approval documents using a variety of criteria.
APPEAL PROCEDURES
If you wish to challenge this decision, IC 13-15-6-1 and IC 4-21.5-3-7 require that you file a Petition for Administrative Review. If you seek to have the effectiveness of the permit stayed during the Administrative Review, you must also file a Petition for Stay. The Petition(s) must be submitted to the Office of Environmental Adjudication (OEA) at the following address within 15 days of the date of newspaper publication of this Notice:
Office of Environmental Adjudication
Indiana Government Center
North, Room N103
100 North Senate Avenue
Indianapolis, IN 46204
The Petition(s) must include facts demonstrating that you are either the applicant, a person aggrieved or adversely affected by the decision, or otherwise entitled to review by law. Identifying the permit, decision or other order for which you seek review by permit number, name of the applicant,-location, or date of this notice will expedite review of the petition. Additionally, IC 13-15-6-2 and 315 IAC 1-3-2 require that your Petition include:
1. the name, address, and telephone number of the person making the request;
2. the interest of the person making the request;
3. identification of any persons represented by the person making the request;
4. the reasons, with particularity, for the request;
5. the issues, with particularity, for the request;
6. identification of the terms and conditions which, in the judgment of the person making the request, would be appropriate in the case in question to satisfy the requirements of the law governing documents of the type granted or denied by the Commissioner's action; and
7. a copy of the pertinent portions of the permit, decision, or other order for which you seek review, at a minimum, the portion of the Commissioner's action that identifies the person to whom the action is directed and the identification number of the action.
Pursuant to IC 4-21.5-3-1(f), any document serving as a petition for review or review and stay must be filed with the OEA Filing of such a document is complete on the earliest of the following dates:
1. the date on which the petition is delivered to the OEA;
2. the date of the postmark on the envelope containing the petition, if the petition is mailed to the OEA by United State mail; or
3. the date on which the petition is deposited with a private carrier, as shown by a receipt issued by the carrier, if the petition is sent to the OEA by private carrier.
In order to assist permit staff in tracking any appeals of the decision, please provide a copy of your petition to Ms. Garvey, IDEM, Solid Waste Permits, IGCN 1154, 100 North Senate Ave., Indianapolis, IN 46204-2251.
The OEA will provide you with notice of any pre-hearing conferences, preliminary hearings, hearings, stays, or orders regarding this decision if you submit a written request to the OEA. If you do not provide a written request to the OEA, you will no longer be notified of any proceedings pertaining to this decision.
More information on the review process is available at the website for the Office of Environmental Adjudication at http://www.in.gov/oea.

BRIDGE

DURING THE DEFENSE, RECALL THE BIDDING

George Burns said, "By the time you're 80 years old, you've learned everything. You only have to remember it."

Easy for him to say, since he lived to be 100. But when the card-play begins in bridge, the three active players should remember the bidding and use it to help place the unseen key cards.

In this deal, how should East plan the defense against four spades after West leads the heart king?

West made a weak jump overcall, showing a good six-card suit and some 6-10 high-card points. North's three-spade response indicated a respectable single raise. (You bid one level higher after an opponent's weak jump. If North had a game-invitational raise, he would have jumped to four spades; and with a game-forcing raise, he would have cue-bid four hearts. You hope that knowledge about the deal will help you to find a way home.)

East knew that they had only one heart trick coming because, from the auction, South had to have only a singleton. East also had the diamond king, so realized that it was right to attack clubs now. He carefully overtook his partner's king with the ace and shifted to the club queen.

South won and drew trumps. Then he wondered if the club queen had been an honest card. If so, West had at least 8 points in hearts and clubs, so couldn't have the diamond king. We can see, though, that declarer couldn't win. He had to lose one heart, one diamond and two clubs. But since four hearts would have made, it was a good sacrifice.
